The invention relates to a power converter. A series of two-quadrant power converters are known which operate at low frequency and are therefore suitable for use with low-level signals. In these converters, four-quadrant switching regulators with full control loops are generally used in the low-side section (switch side). Such a regulator must react quickly in order to achieve a good control of the voltage on the switch side. The purpose of the invention is to provide a power converter which can be embodied in a particularly simple form and which can operate at a low switching frequency with a full control loop in the low-side section.
